

Natural Partners in Natural Environments: Childcare & Early Intervention

A Guide to Early Intervention Services in Illinois

Welcome!

This booklet will describe how the early intervention system works in Illinois and how you can help support young children and their families.

There are many benefits to providing Early Intervention services to children in their child care setting.

Almost half of all children under the age of 5 with working mothers were in child care for at least 35 hours a week¹;

Early Intervention providers can observe children interacting with peers in developmentally-appropriate activities; and

Early Intervention providers and child care providers can share expertise to implement strategies systematically throughout the day.

As a child care provider, in addition to a child's parents, you are one of a child's earliest and most important teachers. Early Intervention builds upon the natural learning occurring in those first few years and is supported in each child's natural environment.

Children learn best through every day experiences with familiar people in familiar settings.

Accordingly, federal regulations require Early Intervention Services to be provided in the natural environment, which is defined as settings that are natural or normal for the child's age peers who have no disability. This can be a family's home, child care setting or community setting.

Illinois' Early Intervention program's mission is to assure that families who have infants and toddlers, birth to three, with diagnosed disabilities, developmental delays or substantial risk of significant delays receive resources and supports that assist them in maximizing their child's development while respecting the diversity of families and communities.

Growth & Development of Young Children

As a childcare provider, you have watched and nurtured the development of young children. You have seen that they develop in many ways.

Milestones

They develop positive social-emotional relationships.

They acquire and use knowledge and skills.

They gain independence and take actions to meet their own needs.

This can be seen as they...

- Form secure attachments
- Cope with separations from parents/ caregivers
- Express emotions and needs
- Develop play skills
- Relate with adults and children
- Learn expectations, routines, and rules

- Explore the physical and social world around them
- Try new things and problem solve
- Use symbols and language
- Think, reason, and remember
- Learn concepts such as science, literacy, and math

- Develop regulation of emotional and physical needs
- Locomotion and movement
- Coordination to use tools such as eating or writing utensils
- Dress themselves
- Learn to use the toilet independently

Each child develops at his or her own pace; however, there is a typical sequence of development that is expected. If, through a formal developmental screening or through observation of a child's development, you have concerns about an infant or toddler's development or behavior, you should talk with the family about your concerns.

As a childcare provider, you are considered a primary referral source. As such, you are required to make a referral to the EI system when a delay is identified. Families should be informed of referrals and given information about how they can contact their Child and Family Connections office.

How Do I Talk with Parents about Their Child's Development?

Talking with parents about a child's growth and development is a common occurrence between a childcare provider and the families they serve. You frequently meet with or talk with the parents to share information about their child's progress and participation in your program.

If you have a concern about a child's development or behavior, you will need to find a time and place to have a more in-depth conversation.

Some ways to talk about a child's development or behavior:

1. Define your concern.

- Collect data (i.e., information about the specific issue), check developmental issues and cultural considerations, and ask your director or co-worker for a second opinion.
- Be able to clearly define the situation (i.e., the child is doing this during this time with these people; the child is using these words consistently, the child struggles doing this).

2. Schedule a meeting.

- The meeting should be with the appropriate caregivers (parents, other caregivers, etc.) outside of the regular caregiving day in a private space such as an office or at the family's home.
- Consider a time when both parents can attend. Arrange for an interpreter, if necessary.

3. Prepare what you want to talk about.

- Have data available, defined concerns, possible solutions, and resources such as referral information to Child and Family Connections.

4. Give a "big picture" with strengths.

- Start by giving a big picture of the child, highlighting positives, and then discuss how the concern is a part of the overall picture.
- Provide a developmental "snapshot" of the child, describing their strengths and challenges.
- For example, discuss that continued delays in communication may impact the child's ability to play and have fun with other children (i.e., Sarah needs support in her language development so that she will be able to play and talk with the other children independently).

5. Ask parents for their perspective on the issue as well.

- There is a chance they have the same concerns and it will be important to hear their perspective as well.

6. Put yourself in their shoes.

- Recognize that this may be difficult for the family and be prepared for a range of reactions and emotional responses.
- Be respectful of the family's feelings.

7. Develop solutions and options with family as a TEAM.

- Working collaboratively allows for multiple perspectives, more involvement and better problem solving.

8. Keep up the good work!

- Continue to assess strengths and concerns, collect data, and work in partnership with family on solutions.

Ways to talk with all families

Speaking with them at drop off or pick up times

Emailing, texting, or making regular phone calls

Writing a daily or weekly note on what the child has done

Center newsletters

Photos of the child in action

What is Early Intervention (EI)?

El Services include

Developmental Therapy (DT)

Provides support for a child's development across all developmental domains.

Occupational Therapy (OT)

Provides support and promotes the development of infants and toddlers in everyday routines. OT also targets sensory integration needs as well as fine motor development.

Physical Therapy (PT)

Provides support for a child's positioning, movement and coordination to facilitate participation in family and community life.

Service Coordination (SC)

Provides organization for the EI team and focuses on ensuring the family's needs are being met.

Speech and Language Pathology (SLP)

Provides support for a child's language, communication, and oral-motor development.

Additional team members may include social workers, audiologists, behavior specialists, mental health professionals, nurses, nutritionists/dieticians, psychologists, and others.

Early intervention services are family-centered and based on strengths, concerns, and priorities identified by the family.

EI aims to strengthen the family's ability to support their child's development. Since services are family-centered, families have a choice about whether or not to participate. If they decide to participate, providers will be respectful of the family's interests, values, and preferences for where services will occur.

EI is a voluntary system that provides many services to families in order to help them support the growth and development of their children.

Early interventionists can:

- ✔ Answer families' questions about their children's development;
- ✔ Provide you with supports and adaptations for your program;
- ✔ Improve both developmental and educational growth;
- ✔ Help children become more independent;
- ✔ Prevent the need for more intervention in the future; and
- ✔ Help communities become more aware of the gifts and abilities of all their children.

Who is Eligible for Early Intervention Services in Illinois?

In order to be eligible, children must...

Live in Illinois

Be under the age of 36 months (3years)

Have at least 30% delay

Children must have at least a 30% delay in a developmental domain (cognitive, physical, communication, social or emotional, or adaptive), have a medical diagnosis, or be considered at-risk for significant developmental delay.

Observation, parent information, and assessment tools are used to determine a child's abilities across the different domains of development.

How Do You Access Early Intervention Services?

As a childcare provider, you are familiar with the expected path for young children’s development and a valued member of a family’s team.

Your familiarity of the early intervention system can be a great support for families who are experiencing concerns with their children’s development.

Below is a brief review of some critical pieces of the EI system, so you can provide information to families and help answer their questions as they consider participating in the EI system. Remember, EI is a voluntary program.

Anyone can refer a child for early intervention services if they have a concern about the child’s development.

As a childcare provider, you are considered a primary referral source. As such, you are expected to make a referral to the EI system when a delay is identified. Families should be informed of referrals and given information about how they can contact their Child and Family Connections (CFC) office (see pages 11-15 for CFC contact information).

After a referral is made, a service coordinator will take the next steps.

The service coordinator will determine appropriateness (e.g., child is under 36 months and lives in Illinois) and contact the family within two business days to schedule an intake visit.

A service coordinator will meet with the family.

During this visit, a service coordinator will share information about the EI program, collect information about the child and family, and begin identifying strengths and needs. The family and service coordinator will discuss what type of evaluation or assessment is best.

Developing a Plan for Early Intervention Services

1

Once eligibility is determined, an Individualized Family Service Plan, or IFSP, is developed.

The IFSP will identify meaningful, functional outcomes for the family and child and the services that will help the family achieve those outcomes.

2

Services are then incorporated into the family's natural environments.

This may be their home, community, child care, or other setting identified by the family. Outcomes are based on the family's strengths, needs, routines, culture and interests.

3

Remember, participation in EI is completely voluntary.

A family may choose to withdraw from the system at any time.

4

The frequency of EI services is determined by the IFSP team.

This team includes the family, service coordinator, early interventionists, and anyone else identified by the family. Therefore, the family may invite you to participate in various early intervention visits or meetings.

You can help develop and support the IFSP by...

- Identifying the child's unique qualities and strengths. Share the child's interests and preferences (toys, friends, games, songs) and areas of strength with the team.
- Reviewing the activities that occur in a typical day. Identify the activities which the child shows difficulties participating in and enjoys (painting, building, outside, snack).
- Identifying the special needs the child has within your specific child care setting. Think about what the child might need to reach his or her potential in your care such as adaptive equipment, stronger feeding skills, support when interacting with peers.
- Being open to working in partnership with the family and early intervention staff in developing the IFSP and in determining the types of services that might be offered at your program.

What is My Role in Early Intervention?

If you have been invited to participate in the family's EI plan

- Check in with the family about their experience in EI. Ask them how it is going and what you can do to support them during this time.
- Share information about the child's development and daily activities with family members and EI providers.
- Discuss with EI providers how you can best support the child and family.

What does EI look like in child care?

- Child care and EI providers should partner with each other.
- Intervention is intended to take place during naturally occurring activities and routines. There is no need to make special plans during an EI provider's visit or remove the child from the classroom or activity for therapy visits.
- Discuss with the EI provider your program's routines and plan a time that is meaningful and functional for the child and program.
- The EI provider will support you and your staff in using strategies that will foster the child's development. He or she will model and explain strategies and allow you time to practice these strategies with the child. He or she is also available to answer your questions and provide resources when needed.
- The EI provider will leave a note about the visit for the parents to read and you may also share with the parents what happened during the visit. This is an opportunity to share with families the strategies and their child's response to the visit.

Let's Review

You can support a family in EI in many ways.

1

You can help the family identify a developmental concern such as a delay in language development.

Although it is very important to share concerns you have with the family in a timely manner, make sure to be sensitive when approaching a parent. Be willing to support and respect their responses and avoid diagnosing the child with a specific disability.

2

You can raise families' awareness of the availability of EI services by providing them with resources.

These materials may include the phone number for their local CFC office and information on the EI program in your area. If you identify a concern, you are required to make a referral to your local CFC office as well.

With the family's permission, you can provide information during the assessment and intervention phases.

If a child comes into your child care program with an identified special need, ask to work with the family on their early intervention outcomes. You may ask for permission to see the child's IFSP and use it to guide your activities.

You can welcome and partner with early intervention providers in your center or home-based child care setting.

Being available for meetings, having frequent communication, respecting each person and supporting the efforts of all involved will help build relationships and encourage positive interactions.

"If everyone is on board - the kids, family, EI and child care, then it is completely life changing."
