

Ways to Explore Family Priorities

- Review the Routines-Based Interview (RBI) information/intake packet
- Review priorities & goals written in the IFSP
- Observe families and look for what might be important to them
- Actively listen for times families talk about their priorities, concerns, wishes and goals
- Ask open-ended questions. Here are a few examples:
 - What's important to you that your child be able to do?
 - What would you like for your child to learn?
 - What would you like to focus on during our visit today?
 - What has come up for you since I last saw you that you'd like to focus on?
 - What seems to be going really well for you and your child?
 - What seems to be a struggle for you and/or your child?
 - How does XX work for you and your child?
 - What does your child like? Not like?
 - If you could change one part of XX, what would it be?
 - What does XX look like? What would you like for XX to look like?